

Alameda County Public Health Department

Mold Resource list

During both rainy and dry seasons Alameda County Public Health Department receives calls from residents complaining about mold in their apartments or homes. Mold can result from a moisture problem such as a roof or plumbing leak.

Although neither Alameda County Public Health nor Environmental Health inspects for residential mold, there are steps that residents can take. The resources below are designed primarily to assist county residents with rental or lease agreements. In either case, you will need to alert your landlord to the moisture problem. If there is no response, contact your city's building code enforcement office. Note: Code enforcement inspects for moisture problems, not mold.

Because resolving a mold problem can be time-consuming and costly, we have included tenant rights organizations so residents can get legal advice on housing issues that might arise from reporting mold.

As another resource we have included our Asthma Start program at (510) 383-5181. This program works with the families of children with asthma, ages 18 and younger, providing free, in-home assessments for asthma triggers and education about asthma medications and warning signs.
